

Trusted Supplier Program

Every day, the world's leading aerospace and defense companies rely on Rockwell Collins for smart communications and avionics electronics solutions to ensure the safety and dependability of their aircraft and the people on board. Working with a strong performing supply base is a critical factor in our ability to deliver these solutions and build upon the trust and respect that Rockwell Collins has garnered since 1933.

Our Trusted Supplier Program, introduced early in 2013, is designed to foster collaboration with our supplier network to improve efficiencies and drive performance. It also provides a formal framework to inform suppliers of how they're doing, recognize their achievements and celebrate our collective success.

The program couples quantitative performance measures, including delivery and quality, with qualitative assessments of total cost of ownership, technology and customer support to recognize supplier contributions to our strategic success.

Recognizing outstanding performance.

Business alignment

Business alignment takes into account total cost of ownership, technology and customer support. These qualitative aspects of a supplier's performance help provide us with a holistic view of their approach to doing business with Rockwell Collins and delivering results. The chart below outlines general considerations for each performance level. We strongly encourage suppliers to register on the Rockwell Collins supplier portal, supplycollins.com, to monitor their performance. They will also gain access to purchase order updates and the latest information on quotes.

Performance levels

The Trusted Supplier Program factors in quality and on-time delivery based on the current performance metrics shared with suppliers through our supplier portal, supplycollins.com. The criteria align to the expectations outlined by our customers to ensure we are all working toward consistent goals and outcomes.

Business opportunities and recognition

Platinum Premier, Gold Elite or Silver Select levels will achieve much more than a symbol of recognition.

Suppliers who achieve a performance status above the minimum baseline will be positioned for business opportunities based on their strengths and direct contributions to our customer programs. In turn, these suppliers may also be recognized through various channels throughout the year, such as attending our Supplier Conference (SC) or direct access to our Engineering teams to help influence design and development decisions, as well as a public announcement/press release.

If a supplier's performance places it below the minimum baseline, it may incur business restrictions until it demonstrates meaningful and sustained improvements.

Initially, participation in the program is based on specific business level criteria. As the program matures, and competitive pressures and customer expectations rise, business thresholds may be increased or minimum expectations may be required to participate in the program. Qualified suppliers will be notified of their status once yearly and placed in the recognition level that aligns with their overall annual performance.
